What is IAPFS

The International Association of Pediatric Feeding and Swallowing (IAPFS) is a multidisciplinary group of professionals who have a particular interest in the care and treatment of children with disordered feeding and swallowing. To date, more than 200 professionals from multiple disciplines have joined together and formed this professional organization.

Purpose of IAPFS is:

- To join together professionals interested in the feeding and swallowing disorders of children into a single organization that will promote dialogue across the multiple specialties;
- To raise awareness among professionals and the public regarding the nature of feeding and swallowing disorders;
- To serve as the organizing body for a yearly international meeting to bring together members of the feeding and swallowing communities;
- To serve as a platform for advocacy geared towards governmental agencies and insurance companies to promote the understanding of the needs of the patients, families and the treatment community;
- To serve as an environment both among members of the Association and with other professional organizations to promote research into this field.

We welcome you to begin your year-long journey with IAPFS, starting with a presence at the 2026 IAPFS Conference.
